

Tribal Progress Report

South Dakota

United States
Department of Agriculture

We are proud to have nine federally recognized tribes in South Dakota. I am pleased to report that USDA has built a strong relationship with our tribal nations, the tribal colleges and the surrounding communities. Through these partnerships, we have assisted in their growing infrastructure needs and helped empower the institutions of higher learning. The South Dakota USDA office partners with the tribal nations of the Cheyenne River Sioux Tribe, Crow Creek Sioux Tribe, Flandreau Santee Sioux Tribe, Lower Brule Sioux Tribe, Oglala Sioux Tribe, Rosebud Sioux Tribe, Sisseton Wahpeton Oyate, Standing Rock Sioux Tribe, and Yankton Sioux Tribe. The North Dakota USDA office services a majority of the Standing Rock Sioux Tribe.

USDA routinely visits with tribal leaders, staff and college administrators to ensure a high level of communication and technical assistance. Perhaps the best example of our strong partnership is the investment made in our tribal colleges through our Tribal College Initiative grant. I firmly believe that the best tool to challenge long-term poverty and unemployment is education. This funding allows us to partner with South Dakota's tribal colleges to build modern campuses and provide the opportunity of a high quality postsecondary education.

The work continues and it is my goal to ensure that all USDA programs are made accessible to all regions of South Dakota. Together we can build stronger communities and expand economic opportunity.

What can USDA Rural Development do for you?

Our programs provide financing for community facilities, business development, basic infrastructure and affordable housing. We also offer technical assistance and information to help create jobs, start community empowerment programs or help improve business operations. Whatever your need, USDA Rural Development has a variety of programs to work with your tribal nation and make a difference in the lives of its members.

With multiple offices across South Dakota, we are focused on providing specialized attention to meet your needs.

FREQUENTLY ASKED QUESTIONS

What kind of assistance does USDA Rural Development provide?

USDA Rural Development programs provide assistance in many ways, including direct or guaranteed loans, grants, technical assistance, research and educational materials. Our office often works in partnership with state, local and tribal governments, as well as with rural businesses, cooperatives and nonprofit agencies.

Who can apply for USDA Rural Development loans and grants?

USDA Rural Development's funding is available to Indian tribes and can be used on reservations and other trust lands. Native American homeowners, homebuyers, business owners, and agriculture producers are also eligible to use many of Rural Development's programs.

What types of programs does USDA Rural Development offer?

USDA Rural Development is committed to helping improve the economy and quality of life in rural America by providing financial support for everything from housing and business to health clinics and telephone service.

USDA Rural Development delivers support in three key areas:

- The Rural Business-Cooperative Service provides help to rural areas that need to develop new job opportunities, allowing businesses and cooperatives to remain viable in a changing economy.
- The Rural Housing Service addresses rural America's need for single and multi-family housing, as well as health facilities, libraries, fire and police stations, child care centers and other community structures.
- The Rural Utilities Service addresses rural America's need for clean running water, sewage and waste disposal, electricity, telecommunications and broadband.

Where are USDA Rural Development programs available?

USDA Rural Development programs are available across the nation. See the back page to locate an office near your tribal community.
